Proposal for final project:

This is my email. This is my phone number. This is my address. This is me.

Mission:

To exploit the anonymity of communication technology, and to explore phobia surrounding it (Predominantly my own).

Procedure:

Phase one:

Spread my email address and password by any means necessary candidly and seemingly accidental.

Phase two:

Through a sole letter in the inbox of my email, recite quote “Will you go further?” and list my cellular telephone number.

Phase three:

Through use of my voice mail, list my current living address.

Phase four:

Gather documentation involving voicemails, emails, documentation of methods, and (if any) encounters for presentation.

Phase five:

Present information depending on results gained.

Inciting Materials:

Email address: cutrahnera@hotmail.com

Password: hebrews13:2

Cellular: 912-604-7848

Address: 1110 E. Victory Drive

Expectations:

I am interested in the aspects of this experiment that I cannot control. I can only expect for one of two things to happen: my anonymity is violated and abused and my fears come true, or my vulnerability is ignored and my fear is without grounds. Either way, I would feel this to be a “success”.
